HOW TO DO THEM

copy

The front cover of the book shows an easy puzzle completed. Study this one a moment to learn the method of inter-locking the Horizontal and Vertical words. Then tackle puzzle on opposite page and complete it, remembering always the following rules:

The numbers in the squares refer to the numbers of the words in the list of definitions and indicate the square in which word needed for answer begins.

The needed word or answer is to have same meaning as word in definition, the number of letters in answer word being regulated by number of open squares.

Horizontal words begin in open squares at left boundary line and in open squares to right of all black squares.

Vertical words begin in open squares at top boundary line and in open squares below all black squares.

Numbering is consecutive and each number designates beginning of a word. Same number is used for both horizontal and vertical words when they begin in same square, or a number is used for beginning of word in one direction only according to arrangement of the design.

Don't delay too long on a hard spot, read over the definitions and fill in easier words first and thus get key letters placed that will help complete solution.

The "don't look" puzzle opposite will give the idea more quickly than many pages of explanations.

All cross words are interlocked. Single letters don't count. Enough said!

DON'T LOOK!

Finish this one from the definitions. Now don't cheat yourself by looking again at answer on front cover until you have it completed. Then check it over.

MADE IN A MENAGERIE

The author of this one must have been an animal trainer as he so frequently crosses the trail with a quadruped of some kind. The big centre cross may delay things a while, but is good help when discovered.

FIVE LETTER CROSS-OVER

Unkeyed in many places but every word is inter-locked and there are enough cross overs to pull you through. All are five letter words except the radii.

A HEAD REST

Only twenty-two words. An easy one for those few spare moments while waiting for dinner. What! took longer?—sorry. Too many letters unkeyed. The author got three months in a soup kitchen with a muzzle on for making this.

MADE IN A MAD HOUSE

So the author claims, but he has since recovered, and from indications we think he is at it again.

However, in this brainstorm he made one worthwhile.

IN THE LOCK UP

This is an offering that is not interlocked throughout and thereby breaks the standard rules of construction.

There are two side puzzles locked up by themselves, but up and down the stairs is interesting.

No! you lose your bet; this is legitimate—every word interlocked, though some letters are unkeyed.

But what can you expect from the puzzler who dreamed this design.

UP AND DOWN ACROSS

The now famous Italian River and Japanese sash are not in this one. In fact, we dodged the obi throughout, but on account of the handy two letter vowel ending word, the Po flows on through crosswordia.
